Dear James & Team Evodence,

I would like to congratulate you and your team in successfully completing a big challenge thrown at you. As you know we have been looking to develop our website for three years now and finally found the company that can fulfill our requirements.

I am sure by now you would have know that mystandard is very high and as you have captured it well in one of your email "to perfect this website in every nook & cranny" and you delivered them.

If anyone says that creating a website is smooth sailing, it is not! It will never be! There were moments of frustration and anxiety mixed with miscommunication during the development and if I looked back now, I am glad that you are committed to finishing off where you start. I think this quality that has set you apart in the industry, the spirit of never give up and let us finish where we started. You have persevered when it is actually easier to say you cannot do it because you take this project as if it is your own website.

Also I want to thank you for your generosity from times to times to make the website better without charging us any fee. Having said that, we are aware that you are doing this as a living and your skills and experience must be fairly compensated and yet you have demonstrated that even though money is important but taking pride in one work is more important than the money itself.

I am sure that this is not the end of us working together rather the beginning of years as partners to make JDM Concept the premier choice of JDM Automotive tuning company in australia

Yours sincerely
